INTRODUCTION

You probably know this feeling. You get through the day somehow. Work, kids, responsibilities...

Food is something you squeeze in between everything else. Some days you feel like you did “okay”. Other days... not so much. And in the evening, it hits:

“I messed it up again.”

“I need more discipline.”

“I’ll start again tomorrow.”

I want to show you a different way. This e-book isn’t about perfection.

It’s about setting up your eating in a simple way that works—even on the days when you don’t have the energy or capacity for anything complicated. Don’t expect another diet.

Expect a system that finally stops working against you and starts working for you.

WHO WILL GUIDE YOU THROUGH THIS PLAN?

My name is Michaela Valik. I'm a nutrition coach, a Food & Nutrition student at La Trobe University in Australia and most importantly, a mum.

I live on the Gold Coast, and my life looks a lot like yours: balancing family, work, and trying to take care of myself at the same time.

For a long time, I was trying to figure out how to have energy for everything I love while still feeling good in my body.

What I realised is this: Nutrition science can be complex—but applying it to real life must be simple.

Today, I help women eat real food without guilt, restriction, or extremes.

QUICK GUIDE

This plan is divided into 7 simple steps.

Each day, you'll learn one thing that will make your life easier.

Go day by day: Each step builds on the previous one.

Apply immediately: Every day includes a small action – no extra time needed, just a shift in focus.

No stress: If you miss a day, just continue tomorrow.

This isn't about doing everything perfectly.

It's about finally doing something that works.

DAY 1

A BREAKFAST THAT WON'T LET YOU DOWN

How you start your day affects everything that follows.

Not every woman needs to eat first thing in the morning. But if you feel low on energy, get hungry quickly, or struggle with cravings – your first meal matters.

Many women feel significantly better when they actually eat in the morning instead of running on coffee.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Protein at breakfast helps you stay full longer.

If you start your day with only fast carbs → energy drops quickly → hunger comes back fast.

WHAT TO DO TODAY

- Eat within 1–2 hours after waking
- Add protein to your breakfast
- Don't rely only on coffee

SIMPLE IDEAS

- Greek yoghurt + fruit + oats + nuts
- Bread + eggs + ham + tables
- Cottage + bread + tomatoes

EXAMPLE

Instead of just grabbing a banana, add it to yoghurt with some nuts.
You'll stay full for hours – not minutes.

YOUR TASK

Have a protein-based breakfast and notice:

- How long you stayed full
- Your energy during the morning

DAY 2

THE SATIETY RULE: HOW TO BUILD YOUR PLATE

You don't need to count calories to eat better.

What matters more is how you build your plate.

This is exactly what I teach my clients first - because once this clicks, everything gets easier.

Simple structure:

- Protein = your palm
- Carbs = your fist
- tables = 2 handfuls
- Fats = your thumb

No weighing. Just a simple system.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Meals with protein + carbs + tables + fats

- keep you full
- stabilise energy
- reduce cravings

WHAT TO DO TODAY

- Adjust one meal using this rule
- Don't base your meal only on carbs
- Add tables - even where you usually don't

EXAMPLE

Instead of a big plate of pasta with a little sauce, have a smaller portion of pasta but add a proper serving of meat/ tunna/ tofu and a bowl of salad.

YOUR TASK

Look at one meal today and ask:

- Is there protein?
- Is there tables?
- Is there carbs?

DAY 3

HOW TO EAT MORE PROTEIN (WITHOUT OVERTHINKING IT)

Most women I work with don't eat enough protein without even realising it.

Protein is one of the simplest ways to improve satiety and stabilise your eating. And it doesn't require complicated cooking or extremes.

The goal isn't to change everything.

The goal is to add protein to meals you already eat.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Protein:

- keeps you full
- supports muscle
- reduces cravings.

WHAT TO DO TODAY

Find 3 easy protein options you always have at home:

- Greek yoghurt
- Eggs
- Cottage cheese
- Tuna
- Mozzarella
- Ham
- Tofu

EXAMPLE

Add protein to meals you already eat – don't reinvent everything.

YOUR TASK

Write down your 3 “go-to” protein options

DAY 4

DINNER FOR BETTER SLEEP

Evening eating affects the next day more than you think.

Going to bed too full or too hungry often leads to:

- More fatigue
- Increased hunger
- Stronger cravings
- Poorer decisions

The goal is a normal, satisfying dinner that isn't too heavy.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

- Heavy, fatty meals may worsen sleep
- Too much sugar at night can disrupt hunger the next day
- Going to bed starving isn't helpful either

WHAT TO DO TODAY

- Eat dinner 2–3 hours before bed
- Keep it balanced (not heavy, not too light)
- Slow down in the evening

EXAMPLE

Skipping dinner → strong cravings later → overeating.

A normal dinner would have prevented that.

YOUR TASK

Plan your dinner today and reflect:

- Did it satisfy you?
- How did you feel after?
- How was your hunger the next morning?

DAY 5

EMOTIONAL EATING & HUNGER AWARENESS

Evening cravings are often not about the evening. They're the result of the whole day. This is one of the biggest breakthroughs my clients have.

Emotional vs physical hunger - How to tell the difference:

Physical hunger:

- Comes gradually
- You'd eat various foods
- Linked to an empty stomach
- Goes away after eating

Emotional craving:

- Comes suddenly
- Focused on specific foods
- Often sweet or "comfort" foods
- Can persist after eating
- May bring guilt

WHY GUILT DOESN'T HELP

Guilt often creates a cycle:

- You restrict the next day
- You feel tired
- Cravings return

WHAT TO DO TODAY

- Eat enough during the day
- Have a proper dinner
- Don't compensate the next day
- Notice your triggers

YOUR TASK

Pause before eating:

- Wait 5 minutes
- Take 5 deep breaths
- Ask: "What do I actually need?"

Sometimes it's rest.

Sometimes it's food.

Both are okay.

DAY 6

THE 80/20 RULE & ENDING FOOD GUILT

Perfection doesn't work. Balance does.

If you want this to last, you need flexibility—not more rules.

80/20 rule

- 80% → balanced, everyday meals
- 20% → foods you enjoy

This is what makes it sustainable.

WHAT TO DO TODAY

Think about:

- What you want to keep in your diet
- What supports you
- What drains your energy

EXAMPLE

You have ice cream with your daughter. That's okay.

Enjoy it.

Next meal → back to your normal balanced plate.

YOUR TASK

Write:

- 10 foods that are your “base”
- 5 foods you enjoy without guilt

DAY 7

MOVEMENT AS A LIFEHACK

You don't need more workouts.

You need more natural movement.

Walking is one of the most underrated tools for energy, fat loss and/ or mental clarity.

WHAT TO DO TODAY

Ask yourself:

- Where can I add movement?
- What is realistic?
- What works even on low-energy days?

EXAMPLE

Park further from your final destination and walk.

→ 20 minutes of movement “built into” your day.

YOUR TASK

- Add 10–20 minutes of movement today
- Go for a walk
- Integrate movement into your routine

7 DAYS DONE. WHAT NOW?

You've just completed 7 days. You've learned that a protein breakfast keeps you full for hours, that a well-built plate means fewer cravings in the evening, that movement doesn't have to be a punishment, and that guilt has never helped anyone.

That's not nothing. These are things most women don't know even after years of dieting.

But principles are just the beginning. The harder part — and the most important one — is figuring out what works specifically for you, your life, and your day. And that's exactly what I'm here for.

FAQ

1. I don't have time to cook → You don't need to. Ready to eat rice + can of tunna + Frozen vegetable = 2 mins meal.
2. My family doesn't eat healthy → Don't cook twice. Adjust your portion.
3. I'm always on the go → Even at a petrol station: Greek yoghurt + banana/ mozzarella + cherry tomatoes.
4. Evening cravings → Often from under-eating earlier. Add protein.
5. Nothing has worked → You likely tried extremes. This is about balance.
6. Stress eating → Try breathing first. If you eat, no guilt - just continue normally.

YOUR NEXT STEP

At this point, you might be thinking:

“This makes sense... but I don’t know how to apply it to my life.”

That’s exactly what my consultation is for.

Because every woman is different.

Together, we:

- Identify what’s holding you back
- Set a plan that fits your life
- Improve your energy, hunger, and habits
- Find results without extremes

No extremes. No starting over. Just real progress.

Not sure if it’s for you?

That’s okay.
